

Call for papers on technologies for the Agricultural Technologies and Innovations Market (MITA) 2025 under the theme: "Integrated soil management"

The West and Central African Council for Agricultural Research and Development (CORAF) is launching a call for technologies and innovations as part of the next Agricultural Innovation and Technology Market (MITA), which will take place from October 20 to 24, 2025 in Bamako under the theme "Integrated soil management." MITA is a key CORAF event aimed at highlighting technological advances and innovations in agricultural research in West and Central Africa. CORAF aims to consolidate the achievements in technologies and innovations developed in recent years in integrated soil management in West and Central Africa.

The MITA 2025 Call for Technologies invites generators of know-how, technologies and innovations in Integrated soil management from national, regional and international agricultural research institutions and centres to submit their available technologies and innovations that meet as many of the following conditions as possible:

- Already tested because it is already approved.
- Climate-smart because it contributes to increasing productivity, adaptation and to mitigation of greenhouse effects.
- Nutrition sensitive because it preserves the nutritional quality of agricultural products.
- Gender sensitive because usable by all categories of society
- Socially acceptable because it conforms to the sociocultural norms and practices of the target communities.
- Physically and economically accessible because it is available at an affordable cost.

Please submit your technology or innovation by filling out the form whose access link is: <https://ee.coraf.org/x/pmfN1sl6>

The selected technologies and innovations will be presented during MITA in Bamako in October 2025.
